Austin Marland
Medium: Wood

Austin moved from New York to New Mexico in 2012 to pursue his art of woodturning. Austin is a 4th generation woodworker. His Dad was a cabinet maker for over 40 years and his Grandfather and Great-grandfather were general carpenters. As a result, Austin grew up surrounded by the craft. When Austin was 17 he used a lathe for the first time to make a honey dipper. He quickly saw the demand for fine crafted items like rolling pins, cutting boards, bottle stoppers and more. He's been woodworking ever since that first honey dipper. Recently, he left his day job (managing a wood store) to pursue his art full time.
